To the Editor:

Hysteria, as implied by Ron Feleay, is not part of Republican DNA. (“Rallying the base,” Letters, Dec.14) Instead, we are realistic, logical, and pragmatic. We see 7000 migrants walking or being bused through Mexico to our southern border, we ask: Is this “spontaneous” as alleged? Who supplied the water, food, tents, and port-a-potties? Who’s providing scripts for these uneducated, unskilled people to claim asylum and now to ask our government to give each $50,000 because we won’t accept them?

They carry flags of their home countries and attack our borders and guards. Is this how one requests asylum?

We believe in the rule of law and secure borders. With no borders, we have no country. We already have 11 million illegal immigrants here. That’s plenty!

The caravan at our border isn’t phony; it IS a crisis. Who invited them here and promised them asylum?

As to the next crisis that Feleay claims Republicans will dream up, I say just wait until Gavin Newsom takes office with his fantasies of free education, free health care for all including illegal immigrants, more sanctuary cities, open borders, no ICE, and universal basic salary. Then you’ll see a crisis and it won’t be imaginary.
